August is heating up at SAF as we prepare for the 19th Annual Model Exhibit. Don't worry though, there's still time to see BOOM: Changing Seattle, which has been showcased by Seattle Weekly, The Urbanist and The Stranger and is running through August. If you're looking for something for the kids to do while they're on break we have you covered with our Architecture in Action Summer Camp and our tour schedule has really filled out this month with tours for every architectural interest.

Last week, our executive director, Stacy Segal was interviewed on New Day Northwest where she discussed beloved Seattle buildings like the Smith Tower and fielded questions about how SAF contributes to the community.

Resident's Podium for Seattle Legacy

With Seattle City Council Member Lisa Herbold

Hosted by Ghosts of Seattle Past

Thursday, August 11, 6:30 - 8:30 PM

at the Center for Architecture and Design
Seattle residents, artists, and community organizers will testify about the places they want preserved. Meanwhile city officials, landlords, real estate developers, policy makers and other community members are invited to come together to listen and learn from these voices across our city.

Through better collective understanding of the historic businesses and gathering spaces that knit together our current urban fabric, we can determine how to design the most collaborative, inclusive and considered version of Seattle, conceived by the many.

Speakers: Eugenia Woo, Rahwa Habte, Elissa Washuta, Stephanie Johnson-Toliver, Ken Workman, Sarah Galvin, Dave Holden, Jeff Stevens, Pio DeGano, Wes Browning, Clark Humphrey, Nancy Chang, Suntonio Bandanaz, Philip Wohlsteller, Ethan Phelps-Goodman, Yin Yu, and more
