Frank Lloyd Wright once said, "Architecture is a kind of music." When we speak about architecture, there can often be overlap with music we use - rhythm, repetition, even a crescendo can help describe when moving through a space. This March, architecture's connection to music venues and experiences is further explored in our upcoming Matters to Seattle, a Design In Depth lecture on Thursday, March 12 Read on to learn more!

Location, Location: Exploring Seattle Through the Filmmaker's Lens, April

A Design In Depth Lecture
SIFF Cinema Uptown, 6:30 - 8pm

Like music and literature, film provides an immersive experience that can transport us to new places and perspectives. Following Seattle's history on film, we can see both a documentation of how our built environment has changed, but also the ways in which Seattle have evolved, from early Hollywood features to local productions happening today. When looking behind-the-scenes, our experience can be seen as a product of countless dedicated individuals along the stage of the process-from location scouts, advocates of our majestic theaters, and champions within creating spaces, and stories, that allow us to feel connected to a different time, location or person.

Speakers:
David Drummond, Freelance location scout
Randy Hodgins, University of Washington
Vicky Lee, Seattle Theatre Group

Purple & Gold: From Gothic to Modern at the UW Core
Special Cherry Blossom Edition, March 21, 11:30

Come see how this glorious "University of a Thousand Years" has managed through its first 150 years in time to bask in the rich detail of Gothic, Renaissance, and Beaux Arts architecture. Stroll through serene quadrangles, lush gardens and awe-inspiring interiors along the way. Witness some new stars as contemporary buildings change with the needs of this fine institution. Oh, and did we mention it has the most fabulous view of Mount Rainier?

This tour starts at 11:30 and lasts approximately two hours. It begins at the War Memorial Flagpole on Memorial Way NE between Parrington Hall and Kane Hall. Blooms not guaranteed!

SAF to Partner with Seattle's Expanding Your Horizons Event
This month, SAF is partnering with Expanding Your Horizons to bring our Design & Model Building Workshops to Seattle University as part of an all-day event for girls, ages 10-15. Expanding Your Horizons Network is a non-profit dedicated to providing young girls with engaging mentors and activities so they can envision themselves in STEM-related careers. For more information, email Program Director, Aletheia Wittman.

Working with family members, young architects will re-examine green spaces and create a model that illustrates how these natural elements can be brought into an urban setting.

At SAF Family Workshops children (ages 6-10) work with their family to build a model together. Through discussion and hands-on activities, workshop participants learn how design impacts the way we work and play. Young architects must register with an adult and should bring sack lunches.

FREE program scholarships are always available, more info.

Volunteer with SAF Youth Programs in Seattle Schools
SAF is pairing volunteer architects with SAF teachers in after-school workshops at local middle schools. Volunteer architects will share design that inspires them and support students in class projects to design new community spaces. Workshops meet once-a-week over a 10-week period from 3-4pm. Deadline to volunteer: Spring is March 20th. Contact Aletheia Wittman, Program Director, for more information about partnering with SAF to bring architecture programming to youth in schools.
