“Over, and over when I’ve taken Molly to any kind of building class over the years it’s great for her to be encouraged as a girl, and peers her age loving what she does. Your classes flex her also her creative confidence.” — Amy Laidlaw, mother of Molly

Experiences like Molly's are at the heart of SAF's programming. This year we've been able to offer free family workshops, like the one she attended thanks to strong volunteer support and donations from members, like you.

As we head into the giving season, would like to thank you for supporting SAF in connecting people to the architecture, history of Seattle. Your contributions allow us to stay relevant and support families like Amy’s. Together we can continue to empower youth of all backgrounds to think critically about how they shape the future of our city.

Free Workshop! Backyard Barnyards
Farming
Ages 6-11
November 12, 10:00AM–12:00PM
At the Center for Architecture and Design

Have you ever wondered could raise chickens or be in the middle of the city, or plant tomatoes in an apartment? This workshop will look at both architects and residents can garden and farm in a dense urban environment.

More Information
Affordable housing is a controversial and urgent topic in our city and across our nation. In this program, students will learn about how architects, designers and urban planners are addressing ways to reduce the cost of housing and increase housing opportunities in dense cities by rethinking how we build and maintain structures. Students will discuss these issues with practicing designers, and represent their own ideas through sketches, three-dimensional models, and presentations.

Scholarships are available for all youth programs
