Featured Program
Transparency: Engaging the Next Generation in Neighborhood Planning
Written by Khadija Tarver, Exhibit Intern

As part of Transparency, SAF’s 21st Annual Model Exhibit, several programs were offered to explore the theme of the exhibit. One such program connected Schemata Workshop with local youth in an effort to identify and define design guidelines for Rainer Beach. Schemata Workshop has conducted community-based workshops to update the International Special Review District’s Design Guidelines over the past year. Every Design Guideline begins with a group’s Guiding Principles that identify values and built environment strategies for achieving them. On November 1, members of Schemata Workshop joined 30 students from Rainier Beach High School’s Theory of Knowledge class at CFAD for a workshop to draft Design Guidelines for the Rainier Beach neighborhood. The objective of the workshop was to engage young people of color in Seattle and raise awareness of the built environment as a physical way to support community values.

Students learned about Schemata Workshop's process to create the Central Area Design Guidelines (CADG) and participated in conversations about the development of Rainier Beach Design Guidelines. The workshop began with an introduction to Schemata's approach and how particular architectural elements can fulfill physical community needs. Students then discussed photos of the neighborhood they had taken and sorted them into categories that make Rainier Beach unique. The students then developed Guiding Principles which focused on maintaining and celebrating the neighborhood's diversity and community connections, providing opportunities to create healthy lifestyles, and increasing neighborhood activist organizations. When discussing how the workshop went, students reported back that they enjoyed learning about new topics, the group activities with classmates, and thinking about physical spaces.

Special thanks to: Grace Kim, Marijana Cvencek, Margaret Knight Joann Ware and Mira Mui from Schemata Workshop and Steven Miller and Colin Pierce from Rainier Beach High School for making this workshop possible.
